NEW RELIGIOUS COUNSELLING PROGRAM NOW ON CAMPUS

□ A religious counselling program was inaugurated at Lakehead University in the fall of 1969 by the Lakehead Council of Clergy in co-operation with the A.M.S.

Ten clergymen representing major religious denominations within the Thunder Bay community have a rotating schedule of counselling days so that one of them is present on campus every school day between 11 a.m. and 2 p.m.

A counselling office has been set aside for the "part-time chaplains" in the University Centre. Students who wish to see one of the counsellors should contact the AMS secretary for an appointment.

The clergymen stress the fact that although they are representatives of various religious denominations, they act in one faith in the counselling of students whether they have differing beliefs or no religious convictions whatsoever.

As one clergyman responded. "We are interested more in a dialogue with the students, rather than delivering a monologue to them. We must first learn what type of problems face the students before we are able to answer them."

The counselling is mainly related to moral, religious, family problems as opposed to those which may require the services of the university's psychiatrist.

Rev. Guy Corvers of the First Christian Reform Church said: "As counsellors we are serving as a sort of medium between the students and the church". He added that it is easier for the students to meet and speak with the counsellors on their (the students) own familiar grounds - the counselling room, the cafeteria or wherever the student feels at ease and can talk more freely about problems concerning him.

"We are here to learn from the reactions of the students as to where the church lacks in its functions and perhaps also make clear to them where they are wrong in the understandings of the church because that is an area where a lot of communication, interpretation and clarification is necessary. I think that most people and students in particular have a very stereotyped conception of church".

A further article on the "presence of the Christian Church on campus" will appear in next week's LU WEEK.

FORESTRY LECTURE SERIES SUPPORTED BY $1,000 GRANT

□ A $1,000 grant from the Weyerhaeuser Co. to the L.U. School of Forestry has gone toward a series of four lectures to be presented February 9-12. The Weyerhaeuser Co. is an International distributor of forest products.

Dr. Hans G. Lindberg, Director of the Logging Research Foundation in Sweden will be guest lecturer for the series. His lectures will each begin at 8 p.m. in the University Centre Theatre. They include:

Feb. 9 "Forest Policy in Sweden" Basic background information about Swedish Forestry legislation and organization.

Feb. 10 "Silvicultural Operations and Advancements". Report on some recent investigations about the present situation.

Feb. 11 "Method of Harvesting". Presentation of present and future logging methods cost and labour requirements.

Feb. 12 "Concepts of Multiple Land Use. Will relate the present discussions in Sweden on the topic. This lecture will also be used for general discussion and repetition of previous lectures.

General discussion periods on other topics of interest will take place during the day. The lecture series is free and open to any person who is interested. Each lecture will be published and will be available to anyone who attends.

The School of Forestry received the grant from the Weyerhaeuser Co. to use at their discretion on some subject in forestry. A committee was formed and obtained the services of Mr. Lindberg.

NEW "EARLY BIRD" SCHEDULE FOR LU WEEK

□ The production schedule for the LU WEEK has been moved ahead one day to provide inclusion of reports of weekend events and insure on-campus delivery by Friday afternoon.

Written information may be delivered to the Information Services office (ext. 300) up to 10 a.m. Thursdays, but information should be received by 4 p.m. Wednesdays to insure consideration for the Friday issue.

The LU WEEK goes to the printer at noon Thursdays and is received by noon Fridays for approximate 2 p.m. distribution on campus.

WEEKLY EVENTS

□ THE POOLROOM IS NOW OPEN to males and females in the Social Centre #1 of the Men's Residence. Two professional-size tables were recently purchased by the university in co-operation with the Residence council and set up in the room formerly occupied by the Health Unit. Cues were provided by the students who also make their own rules for poolroom hours, etc.

Pool sharks should contact the chairman of the Planning Committee, George Goodwin for any information about the poolroom. P.S. If pool's not your bag, there's also a new pin ball machine!

LU Hosts Ice Meet Tuesday, Thursday

□ The L U Varsity ice hockey team takes a sojourn from collegiate competition to host a 4-team tournament next week. The Beavers, Bobcats and the Thunder Bay Junior All Stars will compete along with the Nor'Westers. First round matches will be played Tuesday with consolation and championship encounters Thursday.

The L U pucksters are 8-7-1 after a sweep over Superior State last weekend. The Nor'Westers are 2-4 in International Collegiate Hockey League play, good for third behind Bemidji State and Lake Superior State.

Coach Bill Shannon's sextet hosts the Fort Frances Canadians Sunday before returning to ICHL action February 13-14 hosting Lake Superior State.

L U sports action this weekend consists of two events held Friday. The ski team hosted the Lakehead Invitational at Loch Lomond with Canadian and US college teams and the Lake Superior district junior team taking part. LU skiers competed unattached in the Ontario slalom championships at Loch Lomond and Mt. Baldy last weekend with John Ritchie among the individual winners.

Coach George Birger's basketball team involved Minneapolis Friday with a 17-0 record and 28 of its last 29 to face powerful Augsburg. A victory would enhance the cagers' chances for a berth in the NAIA district 13 playoffs. Next home appearance will be February 6-7 against Laurentian.

COMMENT

□ A recent memo entitled "Examination of our University Structure- A call for Unity and Constructive Motion" was circulated amongst the academic and administrative staff at Lakehead by Albert Bruley, Lecturer, Chemical Engineering. It dealt with the fact that something should be done to keep the University abreast of the "new needs" of our society.

"It is when all facets of the university (faculty, administration and students) speak out clearly on issues that concern them that we will then have good university government", Mr. Bruley stated. He added "The machinery for effective communication is available but used by few".

LU Week is a part of that machinery - not a tool for personal glory but a means of communicating new ideas, constructive criticism and possible solutions, and any comments concerning Lakehead universities in general.

If you would like to voice an opinion based on the ideas expressed above, please feel free to send your written material (500 words maximum) to the Information Office. It will be used for a new regular feature of your week entitled "Comment".

DEPT. OF UNIVERSITY AFFAIRS
PROVINCIAL GRANTS 1969-70

□ Six grants-in-aid were awarded to Lakehead University faculty members by the Province of Ontario.

The awards were reported in the publication, "Grants in Aid of Research, 1969-70", issued by the Dept. of University Affairs, Province of Ontario.

The grant may be used for salaries of technical assistants, research associates and graduate students, and for equipment, supplies and travel specifically related to the project.
