Grounded in the North

A new medical school for the whole of Northern Ontario, the Northern Ontario School of Medicine is a joint venture of Lakehead and Laurentian Universities. With main campuses in Thunder Bay and Sudbury, we will have multiple teaching and research sites distributed across Northern Ontario, in large and small communities. The School contributes to improving the health of people in Northern Ontario.

Diversity

The Northern Ontario School of Medicine will have a strong emphasis on the uniqueness of the region. Northern Ontario includes a diversity of cultures - Aboriginal, Franco-Ontarian, remote communities, small town rural, large rural community and regional centres. The varying illness, injury and health status patterns create specific clinical challenges. A wide range of health service delivery models emphasize support of local health care and inter-disciplinary teamwork. Medical practice in northern and rural environments offers personal and professional challenges, rewards and satisfactions.

Aboriginal Admissions Stream

Aboriginal students may apply through either the Aboriginal or the general admissions stream.

For applicants who self-identify for the Aboriginal Admissions stream, documentation of Aboriginal ancestry will be required as well as a letter of support from the applicant's community.

Aboriginal Student Services are available through our partner universities, and we work in collaboration with Aboriginal educational institutes.

Franco-Ontarian Students

The Northern Ontario School of Medicine will provide clinical opportunities with French-speaking preceptors. Clinical placements are available in the Francophone communities of Northern Ontario.

Admissions Criteria
